St. Charles Zoning Ordinance – Criteria for Landmark Designation

17.32.060.C

The Commission shall evaluate the property's eligibility for landmark designation based on its historic and/or architectural significance, the integrity of its design, workmanship, materials, location, setting and feeling, and the extent to which it meets one (1) or more of the following criteria:

1. Has character, interest or value which is part of the development, heritage or cultural character of the community, county, state or nation.
2. Is the site of a significant local, county, state or national event.
3. Is identified with a person who significantly contributed to the development of the community, county, state or nation.
4. Embodies distinguishing characteristics of an architectural style valuable for the study of a period, type, method of construction or use of indigenous materials.
5. Is identified with the work of a master builder, designer, architect or landscape architect whose work has influenced the development of the area, the county, the state or the nation.
6. Embodies elements of design, detailing, materials, or craftsmanship that are of architectural significance.
7. Embodies design elements that make it structurally or architecturally innovative.
8. Has a unique location or physical characteristics that make it a familiar visual feature of the community.
9. Is a particularly fine or unique example of a utilitarian structure with a high level of integrity or architectural significance.
10. Is suitable for preservation or restoration.
11. Is included in the Illinois or National Register of Historic Places.
12. Has yielded, or is likely to yield, information important to prehistory, history or other areas of archaeological significance.

Descriptive Statement for 105 N. Second Avenue

Built by Orin Webster in 1853 this late 18th and 19th century Greek Revival architectural style building is currently the home to both Townhouse Books and Townhouse Café. Greek Revival architectural style includes features such as a pointed arch, decorative elements or embellishments, porch, steeply pitched roof, front facing gable, and delicate wooden trim. This structure is an excellent example of this style of architecture.

This site is listed on the St. Charles Public Library of historic homes and has been a featured site during the annual Art Festival bus tour.

The most notable living character in the 165 year old structure is Clinton Wing who purchased the home in 1870. The Wing family owned the home until 1974 or 104 years. Clinton Wing (see additional attached from STCPL) was a city mayor, helped establish Pottawatomie Park, and brought the Minnesota & Northwestern Railroad to town among other achievements while raising 9 children in this home.

This home now deserves to be recognized by the City for both its location within the historic district, architectural contribution and the Wing family contribution.

Vermont, settled on a farm northwest of St. Charles before moving into town. While living in St. Charles, Wing engaged in the real estate and lumber businesses, was a member of the St. Charles School Board, and served as mayor from 1877 through 1879. During his term as mayor, Wing helped to bring the Minnesota & Northwestern Railway, later called the Great Western Railroad, through St. Charles. Wing was also instrumental in the establishment of Pottawatomie Park. Clinton and Margaret had nine children, three of whom died in infancy. They suffered the deaths of three more children due to Scarlet Fever during an outbreak of the disease in St. Charles in 1884. The house remained in the Wing family for many years.

In the 1960s, the home was bought and converted into small shops. Marilou Kelly established Town House Books in the former residence in September of 1974. Al Berg held stained glass classes in the remodeled garage adjacent to the book store and then established Al's Ice Creamery in the space in the fall of 1980. Al's Ice Creamery featured specialty malts and milkshakes in its popular eatery. The business moved to Batavia in October of 1996.

David Hunt purchased Town House Books in 1992 and established the Town House Cafe in the space vacated by Al's Ice Creamery in 1996. Town House Books and Town House Cafe are part of the Century Corners Shopping District in one of the oldest neighborhoods in St. Charles.

Located along east side of Fox River, 3 blocks west of Rt. 25 (View on map)

This piece of riverfront property, now a public park and recreation area was once home to the Potawatomie Indians who lived along the Fox River Valley. One of the area's first white settlers, Evan Shelby, laid claim to the land in 1833. Calvin Ward purchased the property in 1835 for $75. Ward's son, Lorenzo, a wealthy butter and cheese producer, built a home on the site in the 1870s. Ward continued to live in his mansion until 1885 when the Great Western Railroad secured the southern portion of his land for its use. Soon after, Ward sold his property to a group of enterprising developers who wanted to build a large hotel along the railroad tracks. The hotel was never built and Ward's mansion burned in the early 1900s.

In the 1890s, St. Charles businessmen, including Clinton Wing and Charles Haines, developed the property into a private park, adding picnic tables, playground equipment, and a refreshment stand. An elaborate park pavilion was built in 1892.

In July 1911, Bert C. Norris petitioned Kane County for permission to form a park district. By May 1912, the area, soon to be known as Pottawatomie Park, became the property of St. Charles Township. Pottawatomie Park was the first public park established in Illinois under the Illinois Park Act of 1911.

The nation suffered under the weight of the Great Depression during the 1930s, but Pottawatomie Park saw many improvements at this time. Park Board member Algert Swanson is credited with securing a large Works Progress Administration (WPA) grant to help pay for the park upgrades. Major contributions from Dellora and Lester Norris and the Park Commission, enabled the construction of new amenities within the park. By 1938, Pottawatomie Park had a golf course, swimming pool, recreation building, baseball diamond, amphitheater, and improved tennis courts.

One of the park's most recognizable attractions, the passenger boats that run on the Fox River, can be attributed to Chet Anderson, who played an active part at the park starting in the 1930s. Anderson, who originally worked a refreshment stand and served Swedish-style picnics, began piloting his first boat on the Fox River in 1946. For thirty-five cents, Anderson took passengers for a trip up the river on his "Honeymoon Queen." Anderson replaced this original boat with the "St. Charles Belle I" in the 1960s, the "St. Charles Belle II" in 1981, and added the "Fox River Queen" in 1987. The Pottawatomie Park paddle boat business is still operated by the Anderson family.

Since the early 1990s, the St. Charles Park District has added many improvements to Pottawatomie Park. Opened in January 1991, the 27,000 square foot Pottawatomie Park Community Center provided the community with a gymnasium, locker rooms, dance studios, craft studios, pre-school rooms, and office space for the St. Charles Park District. In 2003, an 18,000 square foot addition to the Center enlarged the space for adult activities and substantially increased the size of the preschool program areas. The original Pottawatomie Park Pavilion was dismantled in 2000. The Park District rebuilt the pavilion in its original location and according to original plans with the help of private donations. In 2009, the St. Charles Park District dedicated the Pottawatomie Park Pavilion tower in honor of James and Joann Collins for their contributions to Pottawatomie Park and to the City of St. Charles.

Historic Styles / Greek Revival 1825-1860

Overview

Greek Revival is an excellent example of a style that gained popularity by exploring parallels between an earlier culture and the present day. With British influence waning considerably after the War of 1812 and the nation rapidly expanding westward, the style was fundamentally an expression of America's triumphant sense of destiny and the sense that our newly formed nation was the spiritual descendant of Greece, birthplace of democracy.

Americans' sympathy and support for Greece's war of independence from Turkey also temple-fronted façades on the nation's churches, banks, town halls, and houses.

Appropriate to the nation's emerging sense of self, one of the country's first Greek Revival buildings was the Second Bank of the United States, built in Philadelphia between 1819 and 1824. Fostered by building handbooks used by carpenters and builders, the style moved West with the early settlers and acquired subtle regional differences along the way. Not surprisingly, the fastest growing regions ended up with the largest number of Greek Revival homes. Popular fascination with Greek Revival began to wane toward the late 1800s as architects in the East explored other styles, such as Gothic and Italianate.

Characteristics

Homes in the Greek Revival style were usually painted white to resemble the white marble of impressive and costly public buildings. The details were bold, but with simple moldings. Heavy cornices, gables with pediments, and unadorned friezes were typical. The gable-fronted house, found throughout America, is one of the style's enduring legacies.

Materials

Stucco and wood, and occasionally stone, are the essential building materials of the Greek Revival style. Intended to resemble stone or marble temples the buildings were usually painted white or enhanced with a faux finish such as the Lee Mansion at Arlington National Cemetery.

Roof

Low pitched gable and hip roofs were typical. The cornice line was embellished with a wide band of trim to emphasis the temple-like roof. Standing seam tin or cedar shingles were materials used at the time.

assemblages. Among the style's unique features are the small rectangular windows set into the frieze beneath the cornice that replaced the common dormer. Window surrounds tended to be less elaborate than doorways.

Columns

Columns and pilasters are among the most common elements of Greek Revival. Although classical columns are round, by definition, the Greek Revival style also used square or even octagonal columns. The columns were designed without bases as in the Greek style or with bases as in a Roman adaptation. Columns could be fluted or smooth, but they were almost always built of wood.

The most common and simplest capital style found in Greek Revival is Doric; only a small percentage are Ionic, with even fewer in the Corinthian mode. Occasionally designers used pilasters much like columns, marching them across the front facade of the wall to which they are attached.

Entrance

Because the vault design was unknown to the Greeks, a simple post-and-beam construction was widely used. For this reason, the arched entrances and fanlights common in the Georgian and Federal styles were not part of the Greek revival movement.

Elaborate door surrounds were frequent features of Greek Revival homes. Typically, small-paned sidelights and a rectangular transom were framed by heavy, wide trim, sometimes recessed for a more three-dimensional look. The door itself might be single or double, divided into one, two, or four panels. Almost invariably, a portico or porch was added in front of the entrance.
